FOR SEPTEMBER.
(Copyright 1909 by C. H. Rich.)

Mildly Fashion in her hobble skirt will stride the pavement with the men alert to her bright side up again in case she should in time turn turtle any place. It does beat thunder what the women wear, and how they stick on other people's hair, constrict their middles and constrain their toes and that immense dress attach to clothes. But bless us, are they after all to blame, or had they seen in these things quite the same if Mother Eve's first thought, as we suppose, had not been necessity of clothes? Was it the expected in case that with a man somewhere upon the place she ever thought of anything at all but gown, slippers, or perhaps a hair?

But anyhow, the cravat will have bled,
And the pumpkin shown the faintest trace of gold.
The tassels will draw a redder dress.
And the gods will crowd around the elder trees.

Or prohibition or whatever will, here is a fountain that shall serve as still, a place of resting and a cool away out of the heat and the heat of day. A place of quiet and the shade of palms, of irrigation and the sizzling bays that no reformer till the poles embrace shall ever capture for a habitation.

The hosts of labor will parade the street, which will remind us of a happy feast in aristocracy from the olden days when Julius Caesar was a slave of cranes. It is related of that ancient time that sweet September in the Roman city was not as warm and the union fire could only march about a half a mile.

It wasn't anything at all, they say, to watch the mighty pagan get away, the music playing, the flags displayed, and see it suddenly dark for the shade. The gawny drummer with his sounding drum, the hunched mechanics who perhaps had come a dozen squares, and in the frantic rush, age and apprentice with its tongue stuck out.

The faint impression the procession made on Roman capital for long disarrayed the Roman leaders, when the hurried ranks at times not even passed the Roman bands.
And so it was when mighty Caesar came and having found the populace affame, he showed September from seventh place along to ninth, which has remained the case. He merely interchanged it with July, but when he asked them how was that for high, they fairly innuanted him with smiles, and have since been doing about twenty miles.

The autumn equinox will come around,
And Roosevelt, by that time eastward bound, Will aid in the making of such stores.
And when he felt necessary to a few refreshments, and carefully put on his break Will see what sort of landing he can make.

Let wonderful WASHWAX do your family

You May Never Have a Fire, But—you can never tell about it, you may have one at any time. Three days ago Percy & Coleman, of Middletown, and Mr. Fred Hahn, of Eight Mile House, were not dreaming of having a loss by fire—but they did!

You may have one, too.

Public Sale of Nice Truck Farm

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1910, At 3 O'clock P. M.

Having decided to go West, Mr. W. F. SHAKE has instructed me to sell his very desirable little farm to the highest and best bidder on above date. Located on County Road, (pike), leading from Bardstown pike to Preston Street pike, about 3-4 mile from Beulah church and 1-1-4 miles from Fern Creek, terminus of electric car line, being a part of the Levi Smith farm, near Johnson school-house, comprising 9-1-3 acres of good land, with 4-room new cottage, barn, nice strawberry patch, and other fruit and plenty of good water. Surrounding within 100 yards, convenient to churches and only fifteen minutes walk to cars.
Located as this property is in a very thickly settled and prosperous neighborhood on No. 1 road, about 9 miles from the city, where lands are steadily advancing in value, makes this a very attractive investment, as well as a desirable suburban home, truck or chicken farm.
Take "Bardstown Road car" at Interurban Station and get off at Fern Creek.
TERMS—One-third cash, balance in 1 and 2 years, with interest at 6 per cent. Lien and insurance. Deposit of $100 required at day of sale.

Good roads will lead to the general improvement of the countryside.
The farmer who drives to and from town over a spacious smooth well-cared-for road will unconsciously come to effect corresponding improvements in the management and operation of the farm.

We regret to see a disposition on the part of a few of our young people to quit school. Stay in school another year or two, and don't be ashamed of what ought to be your glory, that you want to learn more.
Money from the district school to the high school, from the high school to college, if you can. Except the latter, there is no reason on earth why all children should not be educated.
The district schools and high schools are free under the new law (That's ONE good thing in the new school law).
Get a business education by all means—you will never learn enough.
If you desire to become a mechanic instead of an engineer or farmer, an education will not unfit you to come either. It will be the best capital you can start out with in life.

Buff Plymouth Rocks.

"A thing of beauty is a joy forever," and when to beauty is added every desirable useful quality, the climax of our desires is reached. The Buff Rock we reach this ideal.
Nothing more beautiful in the feathered world is seen than a flock of Golden Buff Rocks scattered like spots of sunshine on the green sward of the rich man's estate or in the tiny yard of the laborer's cottage.
Symmetrical in form, beautiful in coloring, combining in carriage they attract unlimited attention.
Nuggets of gold they surely are, in their ability to turn into our pockets the golden dollars of the world in color. My experience of seven years is so very satisfactory they seem to me the only breed and we wonder why any other breed and other breed. They mature rapidly, pullets often laying at five months.
The chicks are strong, active and hardy and make rapid growth, weighing from one to two pounds in six weeks. They are the most docile setters and the best of mothers. No breed can excel in this respect. It is easy to confine in small enclosures or at liberty they roam the fields gathering their own food. If the Buff Rocks lack a certain quality, I have yet to discover it. First, last and all the time, they are the right thing in the right place. The best breed on earth!

A Mountain Lower

BY ELDEBE.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

In the dark.
Onward came the footsteps and paused at her door. There seemed to be a short consultation and then someone knocked.

"Come in," said Delia, in a faint voice.

The door opened and Walter Lyon entered, followed by a handsome young man. Delia had retreated into the darkest recesses of the room and stood there trembling with apprehension; hardly daring to raise her eyes, for fear of being recognized. Happily for her, the oil had almost burned out of the little lamp and there was only a feeble flicker to illumine the big room. Her features could hardly be distinguished in the dim light.

"Floy," said Lyon, waving his hand toward the tall young man, let me present my friend Mr. Leon Danbury, Miss Hazelton, Mr. Danbury."

How Delia's heart jumped at the mention of that name. This then was her cousin, the man whom her father had intended she should marry. This was the man whom she had thought to escape by running away from school with Walter Lyon.

She raised her eyes and met his, and she so ardently wished, but he was so suddenly averted, that she thought to escape by running away from school with Walter Lyon.

"I am happy to meet you, Miss Hazelton," the young man was saying, "and am happy to be of service to you." Lyon and I are old acquaintances and he happened to run upon this evening and asked me to come and witness his for the license. I thought he had already spoken to the minister." "Then he will be here soon I presume."

In her heart she was praying that he might be delayed and that the Rev. Holmes would arrive first and perform the ceremony. She had never seen the minister for years and she was sure that he had never seen a card bearing his name and address and had remembered it.

Lyon, after performing the introduction, had gone over to the dim light and was examining the license.
"A genuine document," he thought, "and if I had gotten a genuine minister, the knot would be true on both sides. I would bound her for life.
But as it is—" he smiled wickedly, folded the paper and put it into his pocket, as if it was a fool to fool the minister. Danbury, poor fellow, little dreams that he is to witness a sham marriage. I dare not let him know, as he is not the kind of a fellow for that sort of a thing. I was compelled to get some sort of a witness to satisfy the girl."

His thoughts were interrupted by Delia, who inquired if he could see the minister. "No, he is not here," he said, "but he will be here in a moment and we must not keep him waiting. He is coming out of the door, as you see, so come out of the ordinary."

Leon Danbury laughed amusedly.
"Yes," said he, "I believe young girls, as a rule, like such romantic occurrences and, although you are to be married in the dark, I hope that your future life may be one of perfect light."

Delia smilingly thanked him, but there was no joy in the smile, and the tones of her voice died away in a choked whisper. What a mockery the words were. Would there be light for her? No, she was about to bind herself to a man whom she loathed and despised. She would never see the holy rays of marriage light, only to break them the following hour. And all for what? To be revenge upon the man whom she once loved. But to do her just and to be with them in their lovely home where as a child she had been so happy. The home she had forsaken for a handsome man. Ah, foolish, foolish girlhood; why does love so often mislead.

Love, that was meant to ennoble, to elevate the soul above the commonplaces of life and bring the sweetest, purest joy the human heart can know. Yet how often does it bring the most intense suffering, the bitterest sorrow. Are some of Cupid's darts poison-tipped? Does the little god of Love ever lead us to pain and unhappiness when he aims at the human heart? Is it his fault that a wound is sometimes left—a wound that is very often never healed?

Ah, no; he is only doing his duty, and if he does not look out for our selves after that, whose fault is it?
Delia Vincent never fully realized until that moment that she had never really loved Walter Lyon. Never, until she stood face to face with Leon Danbury. A glance at his handsome face had shown her how utterly mistaken she had been. But it was too late now. Love and happiness were not for her. No honest man, knowing her story, would ever wish to callous her wife. No, she had bartered her youth. She had wilfully deceived those who loved her, and had, in turn, been deceived. She must now take the consequences. Her poor heart, throbbed painfully, as she stood there apparently listening to the handsome, young stranger before her, and trying to show an interest in what he said; but in reality, straining every nerve to catch the first sounds of approaching footsteps.

Presently her listening ears were rewarded, and the footsteps were accompanied by the thump, thump of a cane.

"Here comes the minister at last, thank heaven," said Lyon in a relieved tone, taking the license from his pocket. Opening the door, he admitted a feeble, white-haired, old gentleman, who limped into the room. The features of the newcomer were unrecognizable in the exceedingly faint light. Walter Lyon never gave him a second glance, but thrust the paper into his hands with the words:

"You are the minister, I presume."

"Yes," said the old man, and his voice was as feeble as his walk. "I am the Rev.—" A cough checked further utterance.

"Well, perform the ceremony as quickly as possible," said Lyon.

The old man motioned them to take their places, remarking it was rather dark for him to read the marriage service.

"Go to the table," commanded Lyon, "and you can see quite well enough."

The old man walked over to the lamp and opened the book.

"Come, Floy," said Lyon, seizing the girl's trembling, ice-cold hand.

Poor Delia was harassed with many a doubt. Was this, or was it not the Rev. Holmes. She listened as the old man in a dream, as the beautiful, solemn words of the marriage service sounded through the room. She made the vows in a trembling voice and with an anxious heart, keeping her beautiful eyes veiled by the waxen lids, and it was not until the minister repeated the words: "I pronounce you man and wife," that she lifted them to the face of the man beside her. Her husband! Ah, could it be that she was really his wife at last? Would she soon learn that it was all a mockery as before? Once before she had stood beside that same man and heard the same solemn words repeated. She had listened with a joyful heart and blushing face, thinking that earth could hold no greater joy than that she should become his wife. Now, how different! Those pale, sad features and downcast eyes betrayed little joy.
What an agony of grief could not be mistaken for one of happiness.

It was over at last. She acknowledged Leon's congratulations with a glance that now accepted Lyon's kiss with stony calmness. There was no lovelight in her eyes. No happy smile upon her lips. She was conscious only of a great longing to know the truth and made no effort to hide her anxiety.

"My darling, what has come over you?" inquired Leon, anxiously.
"Why are you so quiet? You are no more like the bright, happy Floy of two hours ago, than day is like night. What is the reason, sweetheart? Are you not happy?"

"No!" was the unexpected answer.
"No, Walter Lyon, I am not happy.
Neither will I be, when you learn what you have done. You are to be married to the wicked old man who finds that the wicked do not always gain their ends. Strange words for a bride of a few moments to utter to her groom. Do you think?"

Lyon was silent from utter astonishment.

"I see you do not understand me," she continued. "I do not grasp the fact that you have been duped at last. Ah, well, I will ring for lights and a look into my face will enlighten you."

Setting the action to the word, she crossed the room and touched the bell cord. The frizzle-headed maid answered the summons and in obedience to Delia's command, soon reappeared with a light. Delia took the lamp from the girl's hands, dismissed her and closed the door.

"Now," said she, turning toward Lyon and holding the lamp close to her face, "do you recognize me now, Walter Lyon?"

"Delia Vincent!" gasped Lyon in a voice trembling with rage and fury.
"Not Delia Vincent, but Delia Lyon," corrected the girl. "You seem to have forgotten that I have just become your wife."

"You lie!" he roared. "You are not my wife. The marriage is illegal. The man who performed the ceremony is no more a minister than I. He is one of the greatest rascals in the United States, and for a good reason, agreed to play the part of preacher and accommodate me, and —here his eyes fell upon the trembling form of the old man. One glance, and the minister uttered a hoarse cath and staggered back against the wall. There was a terrible light in his eyes and his pale features worked convulsively. Was he mad? Delia, after a moment's pause, moved nearer to Danbury, and he, noting the action, stepped forward and put his form between her and the enraged man.

The minister turned to leave the room, but Delia laid her hand upon his arm and detained him.

"You are the Rev. Holmes?" she demanded.

"Yes," assented the old man, glancing fearfully toward Lyon.

"And you are an ordained minister and have made me this man's legal wife?"

"Yes, Madam, you are his lawful wife."

"Then I thank God for my mercies, and I thank you sir. You have rendered me a service which I shall never forget. You have given me the right to bear the name I should have borne long months ago."

She then told her story to the two men, who listened with grave interest until she had finished. She finished by telling of how they had saved the poor girl who now lay unconscious in the next room.

"Ah, begorrah, I had better go an' revise her," said Mrs. McLean, squeezing out from behind the head of the bed, to the utter amazement of all except Delia.

"Ye see, gentlemen," she explained, "I put myself behind there to witness me darlin's marriage. An' right glad I am to see that black spiteful tricked."

With these words she left the room.
The minister followed, but not before Delia had slipped a bill into his hand and received the license into her own. She folded the paper and put it into her pocket.

"A proof of my bondage," she said, with a bitter smile. "You have gained by this high-handed plotting?
Do you imagine that I shall ever claim you as my wife. I—"

"It would be useless for you to, interrupted Delia with flashing eyes.
"I have no desire to live with you, I despise you so much that nothing under the sun could induce me to accept you as my husband. I hate you with a deep, undying hate," she continued, "the hate of a woman scorned. I married you for revenge, and for the shelter of your name. To be sure, there is not much honor in the name of such a man, but what little there is mine. I am a lawful wife, and the consciousness of it gives me great satisfaction. I am done with you forever. You go your way and I will go mine. I shall care for your intended victim until I can send her back to her parents.
I warn you not to interfere with me, as it will be useless for you to try to regain possession of her."

She turned and walked toward the door, but before she could pass out, Leon Danbury strode forward and touched her gently upon the arm.

"Will you not say good-bye?" he said.

She held out her hand.

"Good-bye, Mr. Danbury, I am glad to have met you, and I suppose, under existing circumstances, it is just the reverse with you in regard to me. I've no doubt you are disappointed in me, you are my constant enemy, and I will not care to witness another marriage ceremony soon."

"You are right," he said gravely, "do not, unless it be a happier one, fair than yours. But may misjudge me when you think I regret having met you. Although you are almost stranger to me, you are my constant enemy, and I will not care to wit-

Services at Christian Church.
Rev. C. C. Allen will preach at the Christian church here next Sunday at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. Young men especially are invited to attend the evening services.

Married in Jeff.
Mr. Washington, Sept. 13.—Mr. Clarence Porter and Miss Marian McGee surprised their many relatives and friends by going to Jeffersonville and being quietly married.

Entertained.
Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Fisher, near Fern Creek, entertained at dinner on Sunday last the following relatives and friends: Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Fisher, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Cheatham, Miss Martha Louise Cheatham and Howard D. Cheatham, of Lynchburg, Va.; Mrs. Ruth E. Sturges, Miss Ruth Virginia Sturges, Louisville; Mr. and Mrs. Morris Stout and son, of Seatonville. An elegant dinner was served and all enjoyed the hospitality of the host and hostess.

Revival at Methodist Church.
The revival services at the Jeffersontown Methodist church, being conducted by the pastor, Rev. R. S. Gillette, and Rev. M. T. Miller, pastor of the Middletown Methodist church, are attracting large crowds and much good is being accomplished. Bro. Miller is doing the preaching and by his earnestness and eloquent sermons is making many warm friends in this community. He believes in the old way of presenting the unvarnished truth of the Word of God, and when he leaves the pulpit for not so many outsiders, he will be brought closer to God and started on a renewed effort in the building up of Christ's Kingdom on earth.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, Ohio.

Farm and Garden

A GOOD STRAWBERRY.

The Bunter Considered One of the Best Varieties of This Valuable Fruit. According to W. T. Macon, horticulturist of the central experiment farm of the Canadian department of agriculture, the rapid extension of strawberry growing has resulted in the production of very large crops of this valuable fruit, especially in the eastern provinces of the Dominion, where strawberries have come into very general use. The ease with which new varieties of this fruit are produced from seed has resulted in the introduction during the past few years of a large number of test trials. The Bunter, originated by C. C. Stone of Milton, Ill., is called one of the best varieties. It is roundish, large, bright rather pale red, with not prominent seeds. The flesh is bright red, juicy, bristly smooth, moderately firm, of medium to above in quality. The season is medium late to late, plant vigorous, with medium number of runners; foliage good, but runs considerably. It keeps its size well.

FARMERS' BOYS AND GIRLS.

Clubs to Interest Them in Work a Recent Development.

Within recent years a new method of agricultural education has been devised in the form of boys and girls' clubs. Such clubs have various objects, but usually they provide for prize contests among the members. Run growing contests are probably the most common among the boys, although many other crops have been tried, while the girls compete in bread-making or sewing or even their skill against that of the boys in gardening.

The United States department of agriculture has information of 305 counties in twenty-eight states in which such clubs are organized, with a total membership of about 144,000. Nebraska 25,000 and other states smaller numbers. One county in Pennsylvania has 2,000 members. In most cases these clubs are organized under the auspices of some state authority, but in many cases the county superintendent takes the initiative. In many other cases the rural teachers arrange contests among their own pupils.

The United States department of agriculture also gives assistance through the office of experiment stations by furnishing advice and suggestions. A new farmers' bulletin on boys and girls' agricultural clubs tells how to organize the clubs, how to conduct the contests and what publications will be useful to the boys and girls.

How to Spray Trees.
Assuming that the fruit grower is properly equipped with apparatus and material and ready to apply the spray to the trees, the next question is how to do it. If the day is calm spraying can be done in any direction most convenient. If the wind is light spray so that the wind blows nearly as poor able across or at right angles to the rows to be treated. By so doing and working from windward the spray is easily and wholly covered when sprayed on opposite sides.

It should be noted that it is impossible to spray a tree of any size effectively and completely from one side only. In a brisk wind the same rule applies except that only one side of the tree is sprayed, and then watch opportunity and with a changed wind spray the opposite side. By this method the spray will not fall on men or animals, but will be blown through the trees. By the exercise of a little thought and foresight the wind can be made a serviceable ally in spraying. It is quite essential that every part of the tree, trunk, branches, twigs and leaves if free to foliage, should be covered with the solution or mixture.

Never before has a popularity contest attracted so much attention as the ones of the Union Store Company, Percy & Coleman and W. W. Dawson. Over fifty of Jefferson county's most popular young ladies are working like trojans to win one of the handsome $350.00 Krause pianos. Over $4,000.00 in prizes are being offered in the three contests, and as a result The Jeffersonian is receiving a large number of subscriptions each week and the business of the three stores is being greatly increased.

Ten of the girls in the Union Store Contest have added thousands of votes to their totals, the past week, and the race is a pretty one. Miss Lizzie Hawes is still in the lead with 128,300 votes, but Miss Florence Pierson, the popular Home Telephone operator at Fern Creek, is giving her a close race with 111,355 votes. Misses Edith Wheeler, Viola Ward, and others are close up and in striking distance of first prize. In this contest there is no telling who the winner will be, as all are working hard and all are popular and have many friends who will see to it that they get their share of the votes.

Miss Doris Roman takes the lead this week in Percy & Coleman's Contest, having 58,250 votes. The others are not far behind and are working hard. A few subscriptions to The Jeffersonian would place any of them in the lead.

In W. W. Dawson's Contest quite a number of the young ladies are working for the prizes, but there is still plenty of room and a good chance for new entries. Mrs. Alvin Price takes lead this week with 13,100 votes, with all the others close up. What's the matter with St. Matthews and Anchorage girls? If more Lyndon young ladies do not go after these thirteen hundred dollars in piano prizes, they should get in the race and win. It costs nothing to enter, and if you live within fifteen miles of Lyndon you may be nominated. Everybody buys groceries, etc., and it is easy to get subscriptions to The Jeffersonian, the only county paper in Jefferson county.

A few of the R. F. D.'s should also be represented in this contest. Wake up and go to work, girls! Don't let a $350 piano be given absolutely free, besides $980 in due bills, and not make an effort to get your share. Fill out the nominating ballot at once.

According to the official count made Tuesday over 100,000 Coupon Votes were cast during the past week. If all votes had been polled the total would have at least been doubled. Some few changes appear in the standing of the candidates. They are worth noting.

The Contest is making a lot of new friends for The Jeffersonian and the merchants giving the contests; incidentally it is bringing in a new business. This new business is, of course, welcome, but better than the business itself, is the knowledge that Jefferson county isn't so slow after all. The interest taken in the Contests and the support given the candidates show that the people of Jefferson county are commercially alive and true blue and all that they want in order to prove their take-hold-and-push-spirit is an opportunity. This is the spirit that means more business and money in the banks for everybody. And if this same spirit is shown in all undertakings, public and private, and made by our people, a richer and happier community is the sure and certain result.

Quite a number of the contestants are under the impression that the piano is the only prize offered, when in fact there are five prizes offered in each contest—

- First—$350 Krause Piano.
- Second—$200 Due Bill.
- Third—$250 Due Bill.
- Fourth—$240 Due Bill.
- Fifth—$230 Due Bill.

The piano is valued at $350 and if you win one of these Due Bills it will simply mean a credit of just that much upon the piano in case you desire to purchase it. If you do not, you may sell the Due Bill to some person who does want to buy a piano. The Due Bills are certainly worth working for. Don't overlook that fact.

Voting coupons can not be purchased at any price other than free coupons appearing every Thursday in this paper. The only ways by which piano votes can be obtained are through subscriptions to The Jeffersonian, 1,000 with each subscription, and through either of the merchants giving the contests, who are giving 200 votes on each dollar purchase from their general stock of goods and 500 from their new novelty department.

Sample copies of The Jeffersonian are furnished upon application. Subscriptions will be accepted at either of the above named merchants' stores, who are our authorized agents. Send all coupons and votes to the stores or The Jeffersonian, but send subscriptions either to the stores or to this office, where votes will be issued.

LIVE STOCK SHOW GREATEST EVER

ANIMAL AGRICULTURE WILL BE ON DRESS PARADE AT KENTUCKY STATE FAIR.

FINEST PAVILION IN THE WORLD

Races and Night Horse Show Marked by Best Entries in History of the Annual Exhibition.

From a live stock exhibit standpoint, the Kentucky State Fair of 1910, which is to be held on September 12-17 inclusive at Louisville, will surpass any similar exhibition in America. The Kentucky State Fair has already won the distinction of surpassing all other state exhibitions combined in the matter of light horses. Its collective live stock display in previous years has ranged with the best of other state fairs, and the entries for the approaching exhibition indicate that previous records are to be surpassed.

Exhibitors at this state fair are particularly fortunate in having the advantage of the largest and finest display room in America for their thoroughbred. The beautiful pavilion where in each day are given the exhibitions of blooded stock and at night the brilliant horse show and hippodrome performance is declared to be the best and most spacious building ever erected for such purposes. All rings of horses and cattle, mules and jacks, and dogs, will be shown in the live stock pavilion. Arena designed especially for the exhibit of swine and sheep have been erected near the barns used for these animals.

Directly associated with the live stock display are the races. This year the card is better than ever. The half mile track has already been put in splendid condition. Three trotting and pacing classes are featured for each day. The entries closed on June 1, and exceptionally fine class is assured. The prizes for these races aggregate some $600. There will be six purse races, with the purses amounting to $400. In addition, four gentlemen's road races are scheduled, two of them for amateur drivers, and one running race for each day. Entries in the purse races will close the week before the fair.

While the night horse show will appeal particularly to those interested in live stock, yet no fairer proved so generally popular as this splendid display of equine aristocracy. The horse show will be held in the arena of the live stock pavilion, which has a seating capacity for thousands of spectators. The pavilion will be brilliantly illuminated, and the classes arranged are on a par with the foremost of the fall and winter horse shows.

WEALTH OF HONORS

For Exhibitors in All Classes at the Kentucky State Fair.

Special prizes of extreme attractiveness and of intrinsic value aggregating more than $1000 will be awarded at the Kentucky State Fair during the week of September 12-17. These premiums are distinct from the $500 in premiums offered directly under the management of the fair, and cover a variety of honors which will be greatly sought after by exhibitors.

The long list of special premiums announced up to date includes the following: A diamond brooch valued at $100, offered by Gay Bros., of Pisgah, for the best and finest saddle-bred foal of 1910; American Saddle Horse Breeders' association trophy for registered stallions or mares three years old or under; the Montgomery Chief special of $125 for the finest and best stallion mare or gelding, any age, by Montgomery Chief, offered by Ball Bros., Versailles; the Commissioner of Agriculture Saddle Horse stake, valued at $200, for the best five-gaited saddle stallion, mare or gelding, 3 years old or over; the Hayes cup, offered by W. P. Hayes, of Bloomfield, for the best herd of Jack stock; the American Berkshire Swine association grand silver trophy for best young herd of Berkshires exhibited by a Kentucky breeder; loving cup, valued at $50, offered by Mrs. J. W. Menning, Shelbyville, for four best Jersey cows in milk exhibited by one Kentucky owner; prizes aggregating $150 offered by the Red Poll Cattle Club of America; prizes aggregating nearly $400 offered by Commissioner of Agriculture M. C. Rankin for leading standard varieties of poultry; specials by the Southdown, Hampshire and Oxford Sheep Record association for respective exhibits of pure bred sheep; the American Jersey Cattle club for the first time offers four prizes, including two gold medals, total value $50; a special is offered by the American Angora Goat Breeders' association for the best flock of registered Angora kids; the American Duro-Jersey Swine Breeders' association offers $50 in special prizes; the sweepstake prize of $50 for the best general collection of vegetables hanging up by the Joe Denunzio Fruit company, of Louisville; the American Shorthorn Breeders' association and American Hereford Cattle Breeders' association each tender $750 as a special prize for pure bred animals of their respective breeds, one-half to go in general collection and one-half to the exhibitor.

ONE VALUABLE IDEA.

The various exhibits of the Kentucky State Fair at Louisville, September 12-17, put the visitor and especially the farmer to thinking. One of the ideas suggested by visiting this fair in the breeding of live stock or in the cultivation of grain or in the use of machinery often is worth much more than the cost of the entire trip. It is the man who gets new ideas who makes progress. Seeing is believing, thinking is doing, doing is achieving.

PRESTONIA.

Sept. 12.—Misses Lottie and Virginia Lovelace, of Louisville, were guests of Mr. C. L. Cooper, the first of the week and attended services at Cooper Memorial church.
